The biggest mistake colleges commit today.

What's the mistake? A lot of students graduate from good colleges with good grades. In spite of it, they are unemployable? The answer lies in the fact that they lack in one great attribute: Spoken English. The focus in a great number of colleges is on developing technical skills and hardly any pay attention to developing a graduate's Spoken English skills.

The objective of our Spoken English course is to skill young men and women of the present generation with the spoken production skills required for business and social settings. We offer intensive learning and training on many of the facets of Spoken English that a professional must have besides technical skills. It is suitable for all industries and ideal for anyone between fresh graduates and chief executives officers of big organisations.

You can choose from a wide range of skill-set programmes, focusing on developing your Spoken English skills.
